

10.11. “Instead of” Vs “Rather than”

In English, rather than is considered more formal usage than instead of. Since GMAT Sentence Correction is a test of formal written English, GMAT in general seems to prefer rather than over instead of.

Having said that, both rather than and instead of have distinct usages and test-takers should be comfortable with these distinctions.

Rather than

Rather than shows comparative preference for the first item over the second one. Grammatically, rather than is more flexible than instead of and can be followed by verbs, adjectives, prepositional phrase, infinitive phrase and even nouns/gerunds.

James rested rather than worked.

- rather than comparing two verbs (rested and worked)

Peter wanted to work less rather than more.

- rather than comparing two adjectives (less and more)

Henry preferred to go to the pool rather than to the gym.

- rather than comparing two prepositional phrases (to the pool and to the gym)

Michael opted to study rather than to play.

- rather than comparing two infinitives (to study and to play)

Over the weekends, Jemina enjoys swimming rather than shopping.

- rather than comparing two gerunds (swimming and shopping)

It's important to note that rather than compares two grammatically alike items (a verb with another verb, an adjective with another adjective and so on). Hence, one needs to look out for faulty parallelism, when assessing the usage of rather than.

Instead of

Instead of means in place of someone or something. Grammatically, instead of acts as a preposition (refer to section 2.1.6 for Prepositions). This is easy to appreciate, since instead of ends in a preposition of. Hence, as is the characteristic of prepositions, instead of is always followed by a Noun/Gerund (Gerunds are Noun forms of the verb; refer to section 6.4.1 for Gerunds).

Samuel bought a laptop instead of a desktop.

- instead of followed by Noun (desktop)

Henry spends more time at home instead of playing outside.

- instead of followed by Gerund (playing)

Note:

Instead of and Instead are different words, both from grammatical and from meaning perspective. Let's take an example, to first understand the meaning difference:

Samuel bought a laptop instead of a desktop.

- This means that Samuel bought a laptop; he did not buy a desktop.

Samuel did not buy a laptop; instead he bought a desktop.

- This means that Samuel bought a desktop; he did not buy a laptop.

This underlines the typical difference between instead and instead of:

a) X instead of Y: X was done, Y was not

b) X instead Y: X was not done, Y was done

The grammatical difference between instead and instead of is that:

a) instead should be followed by a clause; (since instead is an adverb and so, must be followed by a verb)

b) instead of should be followed by a noun (since instead of is a preposition)
