42-48

(80%) confidence interval

GMAT® Quantitative Scaled Scores range from a minimum of 6 to a maximum of 51.

How to read this report: You can better prepare for the GMAT® exam when you know where you need further study. This report gives you a 'scorecard' on just that—your strengths as compared to past GMAT® examinees. Drawn from your performance scores in three critical categories, your Overall Performance score gives you a relative ranking—and more importantly, a level of projected confidence for your success.

NOTE: While GMAT Focus™ score offers a probable benchmark, it does not guarantee the same results on the actual GMAT® exam.

Reviewing Questions

In this section, you have several options for reviewing the questions. When reviewing, each question will be presented with answer explanations.

Timing

This section displays average response time (in seconds) by status and by category. During an actual GMAT® administration you will be given only 75 minutes to complete 37 questions in the Quantitative portion. You should plan on comfortably averaging about 120 seconds per question. If your average time is higher than this, and you are not able to complete all the items within the time limit when you take the GMAT® exam, you may receive a score considerably lower than the range specified for the diagnostic test.

Status

Clicking on a link will allow you to review all of the questions with that status. Correct questions may be viewed in the Questions Section at the bottom of the score report.
