

GMAT SYLLABI FOR OFFICIAL GUIDE 2021

The syllabi on the following pages list the math, verbal and integrated reasoning assignments for each class. Be sure to read How to Use These Syllabi before doing your first assignment. Your teacher can answer any questions that you might have about which assignment to complete.

Types of Assignments

- Prework: Before each class, you'll have a pre-class assignment from the Quantitative and Verbal Review Manuals. (These books have Princeton Review covers and came in your box of materials.) These readings and drills prepare you for the upcoming lesson, so it's very important that you complete them before each class. Answers and explanations are provided at the end of each chapter.
- In Class Manual Homework: These problems provide additional practice with the topics covered in the lesson. Answers and explanations are provided at the end of each chapter.
- Official Guide 2021 Homework: Practice what you've learned in class by working real GMAT problems. You can access your ebook version of the GMAT Official Guide through your student portal. Problems in the Official Guide are divided into sections by question type. Each problem has a unique question number and it is those numbers that are listed in the assignments.

Special Note about the Integrated Reasoning Questions: The Official Guide includes access to a companion website with 74 Integrated Reasoning questions. You'll need to register with the website using the unique code provided in the student portal for your access to the Wiley Efficient Learning site.

Your access to the companion website is good for 12 months. Please be aware that the companion website is run by GMAC and Wiley, the publisher of the Official Guide. The Princeton Review has no control over the content posted to this site or your access. It is not possible for the The Princeton Review to extend your access to this website. If you experience problems with the companion website for the Official Guide, you can contact Wiley at wiley.custhelp.com.

Section	Problems start on page	Answer Key is on page
Problem Solving	62	103
Data Sufficiency	204	228
Reading Comprehension	334	397
Critical Reasoning	498	548
Sentence Correction	743	778
Integrated Reasoning	Companion Website	Companion Website

- Online Homework: Put together everything you've learned with online tests and drills. Do the assigned drills and tests each week and use the review feature at the end of each drill or test to access explanations. To access an explanation just click on the problem number from the score report that displays at the completion of each drill. If you want to review a topic, there are also online lessons for each class.

How to Use These Syllabi

The homework is divided into two sections: Essentials and Supplemental. This division of the homework will help you to prioritize your study time. Typically, you'll want to complete the entire assignment before your next class. If you're facing a rough week, however, and have limited study time, do the Essentials. But remember — doing the entire assignment will result in a better score improvement.

Here's what you'll find in each section:

- Essentials This part of the assignment represents the minimum that you need to do to get ready for your next class and to review what you learned in your previous class. If you do the Essentials, you won't fall behind. The Essentials will always include the Pework assignment, the In Class Manual homework and some problems from the Official Guide for each topic that was covered in your last class. Getting the Essentials done is your first priority when you do your homework.
- Supplementary Want more? The supplementary part of the assignment helps you to further refine your understanding of GMAT problems. In this section, you'll find additional problems from the Official Guide as well as additional online drills. While the problems assigned in the Essentials section test material that you just covered in your previous class, Supplementary problems test material from previous lessons. Doing problems that test material from previous lessons will help you to refine and master skills from those lessons.

Integrated Reasoning homework assignments start with lesson three of the course.

Adaptive Drills

Adaptive drills work a lot like the real GMAT. The drill starts with a medium level question. As you get questions right, you'll get harder questions in return. If you get a sufficient number of the hardest questions correct, you'll be prompted to move on to the next topic. Adaptive drilling is designed to be an efficient way to practice!

There are two drilling modes available:

- Practice Practice mode works how you'd expect a drill to work. You'll see sequential questions. When you complete the drill, you'll see a score report, as well as answers and explanations to each question in the drill.
- Learn In Learn mode, you'll see the answer and an explanation after you complete each question. Learn mode is especially useful when drilling topics that are unfamiliar or that give you difficulty.

DrillBuilder

As your test date approaches, it's time to start making use of DrillBuilder. With DrillBuilder, you can build your own drills by selecting the number of questions, as well as the topics, and difficulties of the questions.

You can also use the Optimize My Prep feature, which uses our algorithm to build a drill for you based on your past performance on the full-length practice tests. The algorithm will prioritize selecting questions for topics for which your performance is around 50%. By drilling these topics, you can master the weaknesses that may be holding back your score.

A good rule of thumb is to start using DrillBuilder to create drills about halfway through your course.

Your instructor can best advise when you should start incorporating DrillBuilder into your prep.

Frequently Asked Questions

Should I do all the Official Guide homework?

Yes.

However, if you are pressed for time, you can prioritize which problems to do as follows:

Quant

- Score below 35: Do the easy and medium problems.
- Score at or above 35: Do the medium and hard problems.

Verbal

- Score below 30: Do the easy and medium questions.
- Score at or above 30: Do the medium and hard questions.

If I'm doing the online drills, should I do the Official Guide problems?

Yes. The Official Guide consists of questions that have previously appeared on the real GMAT. As such, Official Guide questions represent some of the best practice material available for the GMAT.

What if I still have questions?

Consult your instructor—that's why we've staffed your class with a thoroughly trained, knowledgeable expert.

How to Make the Most of Your Study Time

- Do a little each day. It's better to do a little homework each day than a lot of homework on one day! If you try to do all of your homework on your day off, at some point, you'll probably find yourself doing the problems just to get them done. You want to learn something from the questions. Plus, if you don't start your homework until a few days after your class, you may find that you've forgotten some of the approaches that you learned in class. If you do a little bit of homework each day, you'll find it easier to master the skills tested on the GMAT. And, you won't spend your whole day off doing GMAT questions!
- If you start to zone out, take a break. When you start to find yourself focusing more on just getting the answer than how to get to the answer, it's time to take a break. To improve your GMAT score, you need to identify and fix your weaknesses. You can't do that effectively if you're not paying attention to how you approach the question.
- Practice the techniques. The methods that you learn in class have helped tens of thousands of GMAT students improve their scores. Some of them will seem strange at first. And, in many cases, they may seem more time consuming. That's normal. As you get more comfortable with the techniques, you'll find that both your accuracy and your speed will increase.
- Learn to guess. All of your practice questions include explanations. It may be tempting to look at the explanation as soon as you get stuck. However, when you take the real GMAT, you won't be able to glance at an explanation for a hint. So, before you look at the explanation, practice your elimination skills. If you can't find the right answer, look for wrong answers to eliminate. Your teacher will help you to learn how to identify wrong answers for each type of question. Once you've eliminated some answers and made a guess, then it's time to look at the explanation. Most test takers need to guess a few times when they take the GMAT. Learning how to guess effectively can give a real boost to your score.
- Use the Office Hours. Your course includes 10 hours of online office hours each week. If you have questions as you are doing your homework, all you need to do is go to the online classroom and a Princeton Review GMAT expert will answer your questions. Making use of the office hours is great way to ensure that you are solving problems in the way most likely to increase your GMAT score. Information about when the classroom is staffed is available in this student portal. If the classroom isn't staffed when you are doing your homework, make sure that you keep a list of the questions that gave you trouble so that you can make use of the online office hours when the classroom is staffed.

Practice Test Schedule At A Glance

It's important to take practice tests as you progress through your course. Your student portal includes access to 10 full length practice tests. These tests work as much like the real GMAT exam as possible.

We ask that you take 7 tests during your course. These tests are found in the Core Tests folder. If you wish to take the other 3 tests, you can find those in the Supplemental Tests folder.

To get the most out of your practice tests, you should act as though you were taking the real GMAT.

Here are some tips for making your practice test experience as much like taking the real GMAT as possible.

- Take the test when you are well rested. For your real GMAT, you'll likely have gotten a good night's sleep. If you take your practice test after a long day at work, it's likely that your score will be affected.
- Take the test in a quiet place. While it may be tempting to take you lap top to the nearest coffee shop so that there's plenty of snacks around when you are taking your test, you'll likely also be distracted by the noisy environment. So, take your test in a quiet location. If you are testing at home, turn off your cell phone and don't open your email, turn Skype off and log off of Facebook! And, as for the snacks, well, you aren't allowed to bring those into the testing room at the real exam anyway.
- Take the test all at once. While you can suspend the practice test and resume it later, we don't recommend doing so. After all, you can't suspend the real GMAT and come back to it the following day. Whenever possible, take the test in one sitting.
- Practice your pacing. The pacing charts for the Quantitative and Verbal sections are in the Core Tests and Supplemental Tests folder. It's a good idea to review this chart before every practice test. Check your pacing periodically as you take your test. A good rule of thumb is to check your pacing every 5 to 10 questions. If you are a minute under or over where you should be, that's not a big deal. If you are substantially over or under time, however, you need to adjust your pacing!

This chart shows when you should take your practice tests.

	Goals
Test One	Get familiar with the structure and timing of the GMAT.
Lesson One
Lesson Two
Test Two	Practice your pacing. Practice Plugging In for Math and the Basic Approach for Sentence Correction.
Lesson Three
Lesson Four
Test Three	Continue to practice your pacing. Practice the Basic Approach for Integrated Reasoning. Practice the Basic Approach for Critical Reasoning.
Lesson Five
Lesson Six
Test Four	Start fine tuning your pacing. Practice the Basic Approach for Reading Comprehension. Practice applying Geometry rules and methods.
Lesson Seven
Test Five	Continue to fine tune your pacing. Practice using patterns for Critical Reasoning questions. Practice applying Number Theory rules. Continue to practice Plugging In.
Lesson Eight

	Goals
Test Six	Continue to look for any last content or strategy weaknesses. Make sure you have a plan based on the results of this test to address any remaining weaknesses.
Lesson Nine
Test Seven	Practice your pacing and strategies one last time before taking the real GMAT.

This assignment is due at the start of Class 2.

CLASS ONE – MATH SYLLABUS

Essentials

Prework in the Quantitative Review for the GMAT

- Numbers and Properties: Chapter 1 Properties of Integers pp. 39-76
- Numbers and Properties: Chapter 2 Properties of Rational Numbers pp. 77-102

Homework in the In Class Manual: Practice : pages 27-32

Official Guide Homework: (listed numbers correspond to question numbers)

- Problem Solving
 - Easy: 10, 14, 19, 20, 26, 29, 60, 69

AFTER CLASS NINE

Before taking your actual GMAT, here are some things to do:

- Draw up a study plan to make effective use of any time between the end of your course and your test date.
- Take Practice Test 7
- Finish any questions from the Official Guide that you were assigned but did not complete.
- Finish any online drills that you were assigned but did not complete.
- Take GMAC Test 1 or 2 or both. Go mba.com to find this GMAT Prep test.
- Try to identify your two biggest math weaknesses and address those by doing practice questions from the Official Guide or the online drills. Don't try to fix remaining weaknesses all at once. Fix problems a couple at a time to add some further points to your score.
- Try to identify your two biggest verbal weaknesses and address those by doing practice questions from the Official Guide or the online drills. Don't try to fix remaining weaknesses all at once. Fix problems a couple at a time to add some further points to your score.
- Let us know how you did!

Good luck and thanks for preparing with The Princeton Review!
